

BIOGRAPHY

Conor Schoemer is a Principal with Mercer, based in its Chicago office and is the Central Market Leader for the mobility practice. Conor brings over 16 years experience in the global mobility industry to advise a range of multinational clients on strategic, cost effective, and best practices on operating their global mobility programs.

Conor's focus is on policy design, expatriate compensation and global mobility data and cost of living comparisons. He is involved with global consulting projects for clients ranging from organizations in all industries and global mobility program size.

In addition he conducts global mobility training sessions, presents on global mobility topics at conferences and through webinars, and manages Mercer's Global Mobility North American Roundtable client conference.

Prior to joining Mercer in 2014, Conor worked at Brookfield Global Relocation Services as a Director in Client Services. He has managed large multinational programs in all regions of the world having spent 6 years as an expatriate living both in London, UK and Singapore. Conor is a graduate of Western Michigan University where he received a Bachelors degree in Human Resource Management and of Wayne State University where he received a MBA focusing on Organizational Development.

CONOR SCHOEMER
Principal